School Board's Message

Many thousands of years ago the ancient Egyptians constructed the mighty pyramids. Even to this day, these massive and beautiful works of man still stand. One is awed by their precise symetry and wonder of design. How is it that the pyramids have so well withstood the ages? Quality! Quality of design, quality of materials used, and quality of workmanship in the construction.

And, so it is in education. Each and every student is in the process of building his or her pyramid of education. Our very capable teachers, with the great knowledge and many properties at their disposal, supply the material with which you construct your pyramid. The quality of workmanship with which your own personal educational pyramid is constructed depends upon you alone.

As you go through your first years of schooling here in the Joseph City school, you are building the base of your pyramid. Advancing on through your high school and collegiate years, you continue to build toward the apex. If a student decides that school is "just not my thing" and drops out, that student's pyramid will never be completed, and that student ends up with only a low, flat mesa, probably even shoddily constructed. Also, if a student does not utilize quality workmanship by really applying himself or herself throughout the schooling career, the pyramid will lack strength and will soon cease to stand.

In this age of rapidly increasing knowledge, specialization, and advanced technology, it is imperative that each and every school boy and school girl let absolutely nothing interfere with the completion of his or her educational pyramid--the realization of the best possible education obtainable. Moreover, a perfect pyramid of education is really never achieved, for a person must continually build upon, repair, improve, and perfect his or her pyramid.

So, dear students of our fine little school, whether you are sophomores now proudly advancing to Holbrook High or a first, second or "any" grader: build your pyramid wisely and soundly; construct the very best educational pyramid possible for yourself; and above all, don't be satisfied anywhere along the line with a flat, crumbly mesa.
